This movie is an australian movie issued in 2002 : Rabbit-Proof Fence. The subject of the movie is the history of colonisation of Australia by English people. It's a true story. In 1931, three young girls lived in Jigalon, with their mothers. They were captured to be educated in camps to become servants for rich families.
However, they did not want accept this situation and decided to scape and join their families.
They walked during 1500 miles from Moore River to Jigalong, by following the great rabbit-proof fence, the longuest fence on the world.

The “stolen generation” names these hundred of young people who where captured to be bring up in camps.
